Zanzibar Culture and traditions

About 99% of Zanzibar by origin are Muslims. This is due to the Muslim colonialists from Oman and Iran from the 11th century. The Arabs from Oman applied an entire effort to spread the Islamic religion in all Zanzibar island territories by building so many mosques and Islamic schools known as MADRASSA. They also used the Arabic language in many areas of their daily plans and activities. Therefore, the Arabic language is still used here in Zanzibar today. Since the British were the main dominant here in Zanzibar and they used their own language as a means of working communication tools in all offices and schools. This led the majority of Zanzibaris to speak the English language at even present.

ZANZIBAR CODES OF CONDUCT.

Zanzibar is a beautiful group of islands off the coast of Tanzania. It's known for having picturesque beaches, crystal clear water, exotic wildlife, and rich culture. Zanzibar is a welcoming, friendly, and exciting tourist destination. However, before visiting Zanzibar, it is essential to read the Code of Conduct, designed by the Government to protect the wildlife, reserves, and people and ensure that tourists can understand and respect the local culture. We will cover the essential points from the Code of Conduct here.

Dressing Etiquettes

The people of Zanzibar are protecting their culture and appreciate tourists that cover their knees and shoulders. The local authorities can impose fines if you do not dress accordingly. You can easily purchase comfortable clothes from the Stone Town market if you don't have the appropriate clothing. The Government is not out to get your money. They only want you to respect the local culture and traditions of Zanzibar.

Interacting with Children

Although you may want to interact with the local children in the markets, the Government has prohibited any form of communication without the children's parents present. You cannot take any pictures without consent, give them candy, or even donate money directly to children.

Sea Shells

Taking/buying seashells as a memoir for your diving expedition may not seem like a misdemeanor. However, the Government wants to preserve the natural beauty of Zanzibar and protect it from mass tourism. It is not permitted to take or buy seashells or any other type of natural resource. One of the Code of Conduct's primary aims and implications is to protect Zanzibar's natural wildlife and habitats.

Mosques

The mosques in Zanzibar have picturesque architecture, and the backdrops are perfect for amazing photographs. You may want to pull out your camera/smartphone and start clicking away. However, the Government has strictly prohibited taking pictures of mosques or any other religious site. Furthermore, if you are a non-Muslim, you will not be allowed entry inside the mosque.

Taking Photos

In continuation of the previous point, there are certain places in Zanzibar where you need to request permission to take photos. You also need to request permission if you are going to photograph locals.
